

Senator J. N. Camden.

deficit the Senate Finance Committee sought to remedy, at the suggestion of the Secretary of the Treasury, as it was understood by a tariff on sugar, and the sugar schedule as adopted was prepared, drawn and approved by Mr. Carlisle, and at a later date, when it was proposed to make all sugar free, Mr. Carlisle, Secretary of the Treasury, addressed a letter to the Chairman of the Finance Committee of the Senate, protesting against such action and insisting that it would make a deficiency in the revenue to meet the expenditures of the government, of about $20,000,000, and to meet such a deficit the Government would have to be forced to sell its sugar at a price below the free list. The bone of contention in the sugar schedule was confined chiefly to the differential of one-eighth of a cent per pound given to refined sugar. The majority in both houses was largely in favor of striking out this differential, and according to the statements made upon the floor of the Senate by members of the conference committee, there would have been no difficulty in the conference committee coming to an agreement on this point, if other differences could have been reconciled, and in his judgment there is no doubt that at the approaching session of Congress this differential will be repealed, as I think it should be.

"Senator, will you please give your ideas as to the comparative merits of the two bills—House and Senate?"

Senator Camden—"It is not my purpose at this time to be considered the defender or the apologist of either bill, as against the other. I am simply giving you facts as they existed, in order to let your readers judge for themselves, and to emphasize the fact that I stood in the Senate by my vote and influence to support any measure which presented a relief from the burdensome taxation which has been fostered by thirty years of legislation in the interests of protection. Of this fact, Mr. Wilson, with whom I have conferred, had full knowledge, and it was well known to my colleagues and associates on the Democratic side of the Senate."

"Senator, do you attach any great importance to the question of a tariff on coal and iron ore?"

Senator Camden—"Frankly, I did not during the discussion of the bill nor do I now, and I was greatly surprised at the importance and prominence given to those two articles, as the estimated revenue from both articles is less than $500,000, and as a matter of fact, the vote taken in connection with the duty upon any specific article, was from iron ore, and I voted in favor of free iron ore; but in the Senate I, of course, under the caucus agreement, stood by the report of the Finance Committee."

"Senator, how do you regard the prospects of your re-election?"

Senator Camden—"I do not care to say much on that subject. The people of the State have known me politically, and also as identified with the development of its material resources throughout the whole of my active life, and it is for them to say. I have always been a Democrat, and always abide by the will of the majority. I have never failed to enjoy the confidence of my party at all times, and especially since 1888 when I accepted the nomination for Governor and let the people of the Democratic party to restore citizenship and the ballot to the disfranchised."

After serving my first term in the Senate I was defeated for re-election after I had received the nomination in caucus, and at the last session of the Legislature I was a candidate for the long term, but after the death of Senator Kenna, causing two vacancies to be filled by the Legislature at the same time, I, at the suggestion of many good friends in the Legislature accepted the election for the short term in the interests of harmony, instead of continuing a candidate for the long term, and without any request or understanding on my part, it was nevertheless the tact, and in many instances the expressed understanding, that I should succeed myself for the ensuing regular term, and in the spirit of fairness I have great confidence in my re-election, if my name should be before the Legislature, but at the same time I will willingly acquiesce in any election the Legislature, in its wisdom, may think proper."

"What do you think of the prospects of the party in the State?"

Senator Camden—"Good; very good. I think we have made excellent nominations for all our legislative offices, such as will commend them to the voters of their respective localities. Our Legislature will be safely Democratic, in my judgment, in both branches, and with a margin of not much less than the last Legislature on joint ballot. The party in the State is in good fighting trim, earnest, active and aggressive, and these Democratic conditions always mean success in our State. I think we will return a full delegation to Congress."

Reporter—"I see by the papers that Mr. Capelhart has declined the nomination in your district."

Senator Camden—"Yes; so I see. It is a surprise to me and I cannot understand the causes which induced him to retire from the contest. I regarded his election assured, and think he has made a great mistake to decline the nomination."

The old and well-known Enter Hotel at Shepherdstown has always enjoyed a good reputation, but never more deservedly so than at present, under the proprietorship of Mr. D. L. Rench. Mr. R. also has the assistance of his father, Mr. D. S. Rench, and the entertainment at the Enter is not surpassed by that of any country hotel we know of anywhere.

Our good friend Harry C. Nicely, of the old and well-known eat establishment of Eli Keen's Sons, Philadelphia, Pa., has again given us tangible evidence of his big-hearted generosity in the shape of a handsome piece of head-gear, for which we return many thanks. Harry is a brick, and the house with which he is connected one of the best known and most reliable in the country. May his shadow never grow less, and the years hang lightly upon him.

Two ladies, Mrs. Cal. Haines and Mrs. John Bennett, with one child each, were in a light wagon on Washington street Saturday afternoon when the horse became frightened by the hoisting of an umbrella and ran away. Mrs. Haines jumped out with her child, and further on, near the residence of Mr. David Howell, Mrs. Bennett, with singular presence of mind, whilst still holding the runaway horse with one hand, lifted her child out with the other, and reaching as low as possible dropped it on the ground out of the way of the wheels. The horse then dashed into the tanyard, where the lady succeeded in getting him stopped. The incident is said to have been a most thrilling one, and it is remarkable that all escaped without serious injury.

Rev. M. F. Dinneen, pastor of St. Peter's Catholic Church at Harper's Ferry and St. James at this place, has been promoted to a professorship in St. Mary's College. Rev. F. C. Kelley, of Lexington, Va., will succeed to the place vacated by Father Dinneen.

About Shepherdstown.

Mr. Haines: Within the past week I spent several days at the goodly town of Shepherdstown, known in yore olden time as Mecklenburg. I go over there once a year to commune with the past and talk with the few friends that are left of the long ago. I was a pastor there forty years ago for two years, and pleasant years they were, for the people were kind and friendly and made them so. Of course the old citizens, male and female, and many of middle age, have gone hence, who were then young, but are now old, and as it was my privilege to preach on Sunday, it was to the sons and grandchildren of that way-back time. The population then was largely of the Virginia type, loquacious, intelligent, ladylike, and gentlemanly, and to be associated with them was a privilege of no mean kind. The town is built on a rocky bed overlooking the Potomac into Maryland's adjacent hills; has many handsome residences and churches galore, 8, in a population of 1600, affording sitting for every man, woman and child in the place, as well as from the country within a radius of two miles around. The churches are in good shape constructively, some comparatively new, others remodelled and modernized in their architecture. The Protestant Episcopal church and chapel, built of stone with tower, most eligibly located, can hardly be duplicated outside of the great cities, and are monuments to the zeal and energy of the good man, Rev. Charles Wesley Andrews, D. D., who was for thirty years the rector.

The Normal College building, formerly the town hall, on Main street, is a handsome structure, the gift of one of the Shepherd family, Rezin D., from which the town takes its name. You will remember that it was used as a court house since the war and the courts of Jefferson county were held there, one Judge Hall sitting on the bench. A political rape was perpetrated on Charles town, the party in power, fitly termed radicals, thought they had a sure thing of it, built a jail and added a wing to either side of the town hall, but "the best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft agley." The fellows that did all this mischief were turned down by the people and things took their normal shape and Charles town was again the county seat, Professor Kimler, the president of the college, showed me over the building with its several rooms for study and recitation. It is admirably adapted for its present use and the Professor told me the experts to have a hundred scholars during the term. By the way, he seems to be a born teacher, loves his work, has had large experience as a pedagogue, is popular with the people and pupils, and by his industry and earnest labors has brought the school to a high degree of prosperity. He has three assistants, Prof. Miller and two ladies.

The ladies of the town, led by Mrs. Dr. J. M. Reynolds, through their persevering efforts have had built in the rear of the college a commodious town hall fully 50x75 feet in size, the entrance on a level with the pavement; the cost $5,000, and that without any help from the corporate authorities. Well done, I say; for what can't noble women do when they make up their minds to do it.

The graded school building is a good one, with an addition put to it of late, so great had become the number of pupils. Mr. Smoots is principal. The educational facilities of the town are ample and well conducted. An old tanyard in the centre of the town on the main street, disused for years and a great eyesore, was purchased and used as a portion of it Mr. Snyder, the editor and proprietor of the Register, has built a very handsome structure three stories high; the front strikingly attractive; two large rooms on the first floor; the second floor for the printing business; the third floor two large halls, to be occupied by the Masons and Knights of Pythias, respectively. Mr. S. deserves great praise for his enterprise and energy. The building is an ornament to the town.

I had the pleasure and satisfaction to dine at the Enter house, Mr. Rench, the host. I learned he is doing a good business, gives satisfaction to his guests, keeps up the good name of the old hostelry, and with his son as clerk, are genial and pleasant gentlemen.

Wednesday, the 12th, was a "red letter" day for the Presbyterians in the bounds of Winchester Presbytery. They came from Kearneysville, where the body was sitting, to Shepherdstown to celebrate the centennial of the establishment of the Presbytery. One hundred years ago it was set apart as such from the Carlisle, Pa. body, in which it was then included, and since then has become the mother of several other Presbyteries. Dr. Graham, of Winchester, read an exhaustive history of Presbyterianism during this long period, in which he said the church in Charles town was organized in 1797, and is now the strongest one in the Presbytery. Rev. Wm. McGill being the first pastor. Dr. Henry White, of Winchester, delivered an able thesis in defense of Presbyterian usages and doctrines. Dr. M. D. Hoge, of the 75 year old, a great-grandson of Dr. Hoge, who was a member of the Presbytery when set off and pastor at Shepherdstown, hale, active, with a clear voice well preserved, the "old man eloquent" delivered a fine address in the morning and preached an eloquent sermon at night to a large congregation.

The late fair was a great success, surpassing all former ones. All in debt was paid and a good pile left in the treasury. The management are hustlers. J. W. Toxaur, Charles town, Sept. 14, 1894.
